IN MY PARENTS' HOUSE

written & directed by Tim Ellrich

Film is inspired by director's own family's experience with his schizophrenic uncle

In her parents' house, spiritual healer Holle's brother Sven has been living in silent isolation for decades. He remains detached from the family's life, seeming to fade away more and more each year. What goes on inside him is a mystery to everyone, and his family has quietly come to terms with the situation - a fragile balance of silence and tolerance.

A group of male adolescents are recruited by their parents into a bootcamp to be forged into hustlers, players, “tigueres”. This archetype is the highest idealization of the male character in Dominican and Caribbean culture. Alberto is the head coach of this camp who decides that Pablo’s time has come to join the group. But Pablo, his son, is a Tiguer in his own right, unbeknownst to Alberto, whose coming-of-age process clashes with his father’s authoritarian views. This leads Pablo on a journey of self-discovery.

IF MY BODY IS NOT MINE, WHERE WILL MY SOUL FALL?

A shocking murder that shook Soviet society in the seventies and exposed the reverse side of the Soviet morality. In the night, someone shoots an elderly couple in their sleep with a hunting rifle, leaving their twenty-year-old son, disabled and confined to a wheelchair, an orphan. The investigation reveals the life story of what seems at first glance to be an ordinary Soviet family. While still young, the couple lost their long-desired infant daughter. Later in life, the fate gives them a child, but he happens to be a boy. The mother's pathological desire to have a daughter becomes an obsession. The woman treats Sashenka as a girl, dresses him as a girl and buys him dolls. The father supports his wife in every way. This is how starts a dramatic and astonishing story of human vices and deviations.

Present day. A comet approaches the Earth, carrying the ultimate destruction. The government is disbanded, there is no communication or transport. The world is in chaos. This does not stop the main characters, Anna and Andrei, a couple that lives in a provincial town, from waiting their sons, who had left the town nine years ago, to come back. They dream to reunite the family for this last event. The kids do come, but the family reunion makes the life of the couple much harder. The comet is getting closer, and everybody needs to speak out everything they did not say earlier. However, the most important words bring out grievances accumulated over the years, hidden desires, skeletons in the cupboard; the characters cannot even gather around the festive table. Will they manage to stay a family or did the apocalypse happen long before the coming of the comet?

THROUGH THE BLACK GLASS

A TRAGIC COLLISION
OF TWO WORLDVIEWS

GAIN SIGHT WITH MONEY, GO BLIND WITH LOVE

It is a genre film, but which genre? Maybe a modern interpretation of the classic story of Cinderella? But it might be considered as a tragic melodrama or a religious drama, too. It's vaguely reminiscent of Fyodor Dostoevsky's short story "A Gentle Spirit" with its conflict of concepts: it centers on the collision of two world views – religious and atheist. Finally, it is a love story, with the emotional temperature close to boiling, even though we all know that a romantic story is one thing, while life is always something different. Alas, in today's Russia, the story of Cinderella can't have a happy ending.

REBELS NEVER END UP IN PARADISE

Film is about the impossibility of love. In Russia gay and trans themes are still taboo point and considered provocative and risky. Sex and love; rejection and acceptance; passion and depravity — for anyone pushed to the fringes of society, these emotions can often become indistinguishable. The plot switches from present-day Moscow — centred on the interweaving storylines of Gay Kid, Alpha and Outlaw — and the Soviet Union in the 1980s, following Nina's love affair with an KGB-general.

LOVE, CHILDREN AND THE WORLD OF SHAMANS IN THE HEART OF ASIA

Shot on location in and around the mystic World Heritage Site of Suleiman Mountain in Central Asia, road-drama tells the story of a grown man who must lose love to realize its value. Karabas is a difficult man: a hard-gambling, hard-drinking, 'child in a man's body' who puts only himself first in his family. When his wife #1, Zhipara, calls to tell him she has found their long-lost son, Uluk, Karabas rushes to her to the dismay of his much younger, pregnant wife #2, Turganbyubyu. Karabas is caught between his old ways and the two women bearing his sons: one re-born and one yet to come. Now this unusual family has to decide if they are to co-exist or tear each other apart.

THE WORLD AND PEOPLE

This is a full of self-irony film about the restless Russian soul. Viktor, a man of thirty, strapped for cash, becomes a school teacher. At first, he has to fight with the students but he soon becomes their friend encouraging them to go river rafting together. He quarrels with the school authorities, drinks with his friends, tries to get on with his wife. It is just life, but also a private story of such recklessness, such tenderness and such acuteness that the film becomes a story about everyone who has ever felt as desperately lonely as Viktor, about everyone who, despite their solitude and depression, never lost the capacity to feel and to love.

THE CIVIL WAR THEATER GIVES APPLAUSE ONLY ONCE

This is a film about an actor, possibly a genius, who, following the ideas of symbolism and the "Silver Age", decided to perform, or rather to live through, someone else's life. He could not be too choosy about the timing of his "life performance" which coincided with the late days of the Russian Civil war and the early 1920s; during those years, such experiments were to be paid for with one's own life, but that did not stop the actor. He lived his part to the end, up to the tragic finale of the play he had written himself.
